Introduction

Ranking of universities and institutions plays as important role as a guide for budding young scientists in selecting academic destinations and career paths. There are currently more than twenty institutions/agencies in the world engaged in such ranking, with a wide variety of parameters and weights assigned to these parameters; many of the parameters used are subjective and not properly quantifiable. The wide diversity of ranking methods can make the scores quite confusing, and even misleading, to a student. A platform for student advisory based on objective institutional ranking would fill a critical gap.

It is beyond doubt that rankings have become a significant part of the tertiary education landscape, both globally and locally.

In this landscape, rankings have risen in importance and proliferated in unimaginable ways. It's become commercialized and, with it, so has the sophistication of companies and organizations that rank colleges and universities. Undoubtedly, rankings now play such a big role in shaping the opinions of current and potential students, parents, employers, and government about the quality of tertiary education institutions. The emergence of this rankings obsession is, at the same time, a legitimate source of concern about its misuse, especially when it is used solely for promotional purposes, or, even worse, when it becomes the main driver of policy decisions for governments and tertiary education institutions. In the absence of sound and comparable information, rankings are the best option for determining the quality of colleges and universities.

Most well-known rankings tend to equate institutional quality with research productivity, which is measured either by the number and impact of their publications in peer-reviewed journals, or the selectivity on their admission processes.

Another dimension of rankings intends to measure “reputation” by gathering opinions (which are unfortunately not always competent and objective) from employers, field experts and/or alumni.

There are four or five university ranking systems that take a global approach. They are QS “World University Ranking”; Times Higher Education World University Ranking; Academic Ranking of World Universities (ARWU - often referred to as the “Shanghai Jiao Tong” ranking because it is produced by a unit at Shanghai Jiao Tong University); the CWTS Leiden Ranking and the Webometrics Ranking. There is also an interesting one that ranks universities around the world in terms of their environmental sustainability: the UI GreenMetric World University Ranking created and compiled by the University of Indonesia.

There are different approaches that each of these rankings uses. ARWU uses very few measures but those that they use, reflect elements of academic quality, including how many of an institution's alumni have won a Nobel prize and how many faculty have won Nobel prizes as a result of the work done while at the university (in order to prevent rich universities from "buying" Nobel prize winners). They also measure the importance of research outputs by examining where and how often faculty publish in certain key indicator journals. This highly quantitative methodology produces a ranked list that represents some very impressive educational and research outcomes, but from a narrow perspective. The QS and THE rankings are more broadly based and include measurements of student numbers, diversity of faculty and students, etc, but are significantly influenced by an opinion poll of faculty and other researchers around the world that focuses on what they know about research strengths of other institutions.

Objectives

Following will be the three main objectives of the Ranking System:

- To identify parameters and weights (default) for a user-oriented ranking system
- To develop a web-based utility for ranking system
- To calibrate and validate the ranking system

Methodology

To achieve the objective of ranking system methodology adopted are i) Parameter were identified and default weight were calculated, ii) web utility were developed and calibrated with the data collected.

Institutional data from identified 10000 institute cross the globe, the distribution of institute across 1000 institutes from USA, 2000 institutes from Europe and UK, 2000 from BRICS country except India, 500 institutes from Africa, 2000 institute from India, 1000 institutes from South-Asian countries except India, 500 institutes from Australia and remaining 1000 institutes rest of the world. Data on several criteria such as the basic details such as how old the institute is, accessibility of the institute (distance from the airport), number of departments, number of faculties and their qualification, their research interest and achievement. The course offered, duration of courses, and the admission criteria were also collected. The award and recognition received by the institute and their faculties were also recorded while collecting the data. The research profile e.g. annual publication as reported in SCOPUS/Web-of-Science database and institute declared for the last 10 years by the institute is also collected.

Scopus is the largest abstract and citation database of peer-reviewed literature: scientific journals, books and conference proceedings. Delivering a comprehensive overview of the world's research output in the fields of science, technology, medicine, social sciences, and arts and humanities, Scopus features smart tools to track, analyse and visualise research. Whereas Web-of-science is the premier research platform for information in the sciences, social sciences, arts, and humanities

The Web of Science Core Collection consists of six online databases

- Science Citation Index Expanded covers more than 8,500 notable journals encompassing 150 disciplines. Coverage is from the year 1900.
- Social Sciences Citation Index covers more than 3,000 journals in social science disciplines. Range of coverage is from the year 1900.
- Arts & Humanities Citation Index covers more than 1,700 arts and humanities journals starting from 1975. In addition, 250 major scientific and social sciences journals are also covered.
- Emerging Sources Citation Index covers over 5,000 journals in the sciences, social science, and humanities.
- Book Citation Index covers more than 60,000 editorially selected books starting from 2005.
- Conference Proceedings Citation Index covers more than 160,000 conference titles in the Sciences starting from 1990

In this study the institute is defined as, an university or an R&D institute awarding degree related to basic and allied sciences, engineering/technology or medical/medicine. All colleges imparting master/ postgraduate degrees/courses (for examples some of the degree awarded in India as follows MSc/MS/MTech/ME/MD/MS/MDS) or higher degrees in basic and allied sciences, engineering/technology, and medical/medicine/dental is included in the definition. Only a complete organization shall be considered as an institute; data for a part of the institute or for some departments/divisions/schools/colleges of an institute shall not be accepted for delivery.

Number of institute identified for data collection are:

Global Senario

College and university rankings are rankings of institutions in higher education which have been ranked on the basis of various combinations of various factors. None of the rankings give a comprehensive overview of the strengths of the institutions ranked because all select a range of easily quantifiable characteristics to base their results on. Rankings have most often been conducted by magazines, newspapers, websites, governments, or academics. In addition to ranking entire institutions, organizations perform rankings of specific programs, departments, and schools. Various rankings consider combinations of measures of funding and endowment, research excellence and/or influence, specialization expertise, admissions, student options, award numbers, internationalization, graduate employment, industrial linkage, historical reputation and other criteria. Various rankings mostly evaluating on institutional output by research. Some rankings evaluate institutions within a single country, while others assess institutions worldwide. The subject has produced much debate about rankings' usefulness and accuracy. The expanding diversity in rating methodologies and accompanying criticisms of each indicate the lack of consensus in the field. Further, it seems possible to game the ranking systems through excessive self-citations or by researchers supporting each other in surveys. UNESCO has questioned whether rankings "do more harm than good", while acknowledging that "Rightly or wrongly, they are perceived as a measure of quality and so create intense competition between universities all over the world".

The three longest established and most influential global rankings are those produced by ShanghaiRanking Consultancy (the Academic Ranking of World Universities; ARWU), Times Higher Education (THE), and Quacquarelli Symonds (QS). All of these, along with other global rankings, primarily measure the research performance of universities rather than their teaching.

Some countries, including Denmark and the Netherlands, use university rankings as part of points-based immigration programmes, while others, such as Russia, automatically recognise degrees from higher-ranked universities. India's University Grants Commission requires foreign partners of Indian universities to be ranked in the top 500 of the THE or ARWU ranking, while Brazil's Science Without Borders programme selected international partner institutions using the THE and QS rankings.

Each ranking institute uses the different methodology for the ranking of institute/universities. This can sometimes be confusing, as it's not always easy to see why a university is ranked different. Some of the few ranking system for the universities/institutes are:

QS World University Rankings

The QS World University Rankings assesses universities on six performance indicators, relating to research, teaching, employability and internationalization. To be eligible for inclusion, institutions must teach at both undergraduate and postgraduate level, and conduct work in at least two of five broad faculty areas (arts and humanities; engineering and technology; social sciences and management; natural sciences; life sciences and medicine).

- Academic reputation (worth 40% of the overall score)
- Based on a global survey of academics, who are asked to identify the leading institutions in their field.
- Employer reputation (10%)
- Based on a global survey of graduate employers, who are asked to identify the institutions producing the best graduates in their sector.
- Student-to-faculty ratio (20%)
- An indication of commitment to high-quality teaching and support.
- Research citations per faculty member (20%)
- This is normalized by subject area, and reflects the impact of an institution's research.
- Proportion of international faculty (5%)
- A measure of an institution's success in attracting faculty from overseas.
- Proportion of international students (5%)

A measure of an institution's success in attracting students from overseas.

The interactive results table can be filtered to show the scores for each of these six indicators, showing where each institution's comparative strengths and weaknesses lie..

Times Higher Education World University Rankings

The Times Higher Education World University Rankings uses 13 performance indicators, grouped into five categories. Institutions are excluded if they do not teach at undergraduate level, or if their research output is below a certain threshold.

- Teaching (worth 30% of the overall score)
- Based on a reputation survey (15%), staff-to-student ratio (4.5%), doctorate-to-bachelor's ratio (2.25%), doctorates-awarded-to-academic-staff ratio (6%) and institutional income (2.25%).

- Research (30%)
- Based on a reputation survey (18%), research income (6%) and research papers published per faculty member (6%).
- Research citations (30%)
- Based on the number of citations a university's research obtains, normalized by subject area.
- International outlook (7.5%)
- Based on international-to-domestic-student ratio (2.5%), international-to-domestic-staff ratio (2.5%) and international research collaborations (2.5%).
- Industry income (2.5%)

Based on income earned from industry, relative to the number of academic staff employed, and adjusted for PPP. The published results can be sorted to show universities' scores for each of the five categories, but not for the individual indicators within each category.

Academic Ranking of World Universities (ARWU)

Also widely known as the Shanghai Ranking, the Academic Ranking of World Universities (ARWU) assesses six performance indicators, all relating to research excellence. The ranking considers all institutions with Nobel Laureates, Fields Medalists, highly cited researchers, papers published in Nature or Science, or a significant number of papers indexed by the Science Citation Index-Expanded (SCIE) or Social Science Citation Index (SSCI).

- Alumni (worth 10% of the overall score)
- Based on the number of alumni of an institution who have won Nobel Prizes and Fields Medals, with greater weight given to more recent recipients.
- Awards (20%)
- Based on the number of staff affiliated with an institution who have won Nobel Prizes in physics, chemistry, medicine and economics, and Fields Medals in mathematics, with greater weight given to more recent recipients.
- Highly cited researchers (20%)
- Based on an institution's number of highly cited researchers, according to the latest list published by Thomson Reuters.
- Papers in Nature and Science (20%)

- Based on the number of papers published in these two influential journals, drawing on a four-year period. For institutions specialized in social sciences and humanities, this category does not apply.
- Papers indexed (20%)
- Based on the number of papers indexed in the Science Citation Index-Expanded and Social Science Citation Index in the preceding calendar year, with a double weighting for papers indexed in the Social Science Citation Index.
- Per capita performance (10%)

The weighted scores of the other indicators, divided by the number of full-time equivalent academic staff. The published ARWU results can be sorted to show performance in each of these six indicators.

The National Institutional Ranking Framework (NIRF)

NIRF India was established on 29th September 2015. This framework outlines a methodology to rank institutions across India. The methodology draws from the overall recommendations and broad understanding arrived at by a Core Committee set up by MHRD, to identify the broad parameters for ranking various universities and institutions. The parameters broadly cover “Teaching, Learning and Resources,” “Research and Professional Practices,” “Graduation Outcomes,” “Outreach and Inclusivity,” and “Perception”. India Rankings – 2016 based on this framework were released on 4th April 2016. For India Rankings – 2017, the main ranking parameters remain the same. However, there are a few significant changes in a few sub-parameters. Beginning 2017, NIRF proposes to assign every large institution a common overall rank as well as a discipline specific-rank as applicable.

Center for World University Rankings: This Saudi Arabia-based consulting organization has published yearly rankings of world universities since 2012. Rankings are based on quality of education, alumni employment, quality of faculty, number of publications, number of publications in high-quality journals, citations, scientific impact and number of patents.

Eduniversal: This university ranking is owned by the French consulting company and rating agency SMBG. It ranks masters and MBA in its 9 geographical regions (the 5 continents).

G-factor

G-factor ranks university and college web presence by counting the number of links only from other university websites, using Google search engine data. G-factor is an indicator of the popularity or importance of each university's website from the combined perspectives of other institutions. It claims to be an objective peer review of a university through its website—in social network theory terminology, G-factor measures the centrality of each university's website in the network of university websites.

Global Universities Ranking by US News

The overall Best Global Universities rankings encompass the top 750 institutions spread out across 57 countries. The first step in producing these rankings, which are powered by Thomson Reuters InCites™ research analytics solutions, involved creating a pool of 1,000 universities that was used to rank the top 750 schools. The Global University Ranking is focused on research power and faculty resources for students, while the US National Ranking is only focused on undergraduate studies. For graduate studies and international students, the Best Global Universities Ranking is a much better reference than National University Ranking.

Leiden Ranking

The Centre for Science and Technology Studies at Leiden University maintains a European and worldwide ranking of the top 500 universities according including the number and impact of Web of Science-indexed publications per year. The rankings compare research institutions by taking into account differences in language, discipline and institutional size. Multiple ranking lists are released according to various bibliometric normalization and impact indicators, including the number of publications, citations-per-publication, and field-averaged impact per publication.

Nature Index

The Nature Index tracks the affiliations of high quality scientific articles published in 68 science journals independently chosen by the scientific community as the journals scientists would most like to publish their best research in. Updated monthly, the Nature Index presents research reports of approximately 9,000 parent institutions worldwide presenting a page of output statistics for each institution along with information on institutions collaborating with the institution in the publication of Index articles. Each of the approximately 60,000 articles in the Index has a dedicated article page with social and mainstream media coverage tracked by Altmetric. League tables of output of institutions can be generated on the fly on a global, regional or country basis and by broad subject area as well as by article count and fractional article count. Compare with other metrics of science (e.g., Impact Factor, h-index), Nature

Index is the most prestigious scientific journal ranking with historical reputation on original natural science and life science research.

Newsweek

In August 2006, the American magazine Newsweek published a ranking of the Top 100 Global Universities, using selected criteria from ARWU and the Times Higher Education-QS rankings, with the additional criterion of the number of volumes in the library.

The Ranking Web or Webometrics

It is the largest academic ranking of Higher Education Institutions. Since 2004 and every six months an independent, objective, free, open scientific exercise is performed by the Cybermetrics Lab (Spanish National Research Council, CSIC) for the providing reliable, multidimensional, updated and useful information about the performance of universities from all over the world based on their web presence and impact.

Findings

Identification of parameters and weights (default) for a user-oriented ranking system

In this project we are ranking the institutes based on the parameter which are lacking in the existing ranking systems. Apart from the academic score we are considering the other factor or parameter such as accomodateion (holstel) available for the student, placement facilities, focus on extra curricular activities etc. In our ranking system we are distributing the ranking in three broad categotries.

- A. Quality: In this index the academic achievement of institute were considered. The parameter considered are ($W_q = 0.6$)

Parameter	Default Weight (%)
Number of International Awardees:	20
Number of National Awardees:	15
Number of SCI/SSCI publication:	20
Number of Patents Granted:	15
Books/Book Chapters:	10
Number of Publishing Faculty:	5
Number of Visiting Faculty:	10
Admission/Recruitment Criteria:	5

Quality criteria are normalized by the number of faculties (Teaching personal) in the institute. Quality criteria has been assigned 60% of total weight of the score, i.e. quality/recognition of institute. It is calculated based on number of national and international awaree, SCI/SSCI publication, number of patent guranted, books/ Book chapters written by the institute faculties, number of visiting faculties and admission criteria for student and recruitment criteria of faculties.

A default weight is assigned to the different categories: Number of International Awardees (20%), Number of National Awardees (15%), Number of SCI/SSCI publication (20%), Number of Patents Granted (10%), Books/Book Chapters (10%), Number of Publishing Faculty (5%), Number of Visiting Faculty (10%) and Admission/Recruitment Criteria (5%). All these criteria were normalized by the number of faculties in the institute.

B. Intensity: In this index we are quantifying the academic performance of the institute. The parameters considered for this are as below:

Intensity: ($W_i = 0.25$)	Default Weight (%)
Number of Patent Filed:	10
Number of Seminar/Colloquia:	5
Students Programme/courses:	5
Number of Student Events:	5
Number of National Events:	5
Number of International Events	15
Number of R&D Projects	15
Number of Doctoral Degree Awarded	20
Number of Industrial collaboration/Projects:	10

Certain default weight is assigned to the parameters to calculate the intensity of the instate performance. It contribute 25% of total rank of the institute.

The default weight assigned as follows Number of Patent Filed (10%), Number of Seminar/Colloquia (5%), Students Programme/courses(5%), Number of Student Events(5%), Number of National Events(5%), Number of International Events (15%), Number of R&D Projects(15%), Number of Doctoral Degree Awarded(20%), Number of Industrial collaboration/Projects(10%), Number of Technology Transferred(10%). All these criteria were normalized by the number of faculties in the institute.

C. Outreach: Outreach is the visibility of the institute across the globe. It include the various activities apart from the academic activities performed by the institute to showcase their activities through outreach activities, collaboration network established with other institutes. Outreach score is calculated based on the following parametrs.

It	Outreach: ($W_o = 0.15$)		Default Witght (%)
	Degree-of-Networking:		20
	Number of Outreach Activities:		20
	No. of Scholarship		25
	Multi-disciplinarity		5
	Extra-curricular Opportunities:		10
	Placement Services:		20

contributes 15% to the rank calculation for the institute.

The default weight assigns are Degree-of-Networking (20%), Number of Outreach Activities (20%), No. of Scholarship (50%), Multi-disciplinarity (5%), Extra-curricular Opportunities (10%).

Web-module for Ranking System

A web-module was developed for the automatically calculation of Rank-score, data-collection, feedback, student and faculty registration.

Technology used for web-module are:

PHP: PHP stands for Hypertext Preprocessor (no, the acronym doesn't follow the name). It's an open source, server-side, scripting language used for the development of web applications.

By scripting language, we mean a program that is script-based (lines of code) written for the automation of tasks.

What does open source mean? Think of a car manufacturer making the secret to its design models and technology innovations available to anyone interested. These design and technology details can be redistributed, modified, and adopted without the fear of any legal repercussions. The world today might have developed an amazing supercar!

Web pages can be designed using HTML. With HTML, code execution is done on the user's browser (client-side). On the other hand, with PHP server-side scripting language, it's executed on the server before it gets to the web browser of the user.

PHP is mainly focused on server-side scripting, so you can do anything any other CGI program can do, such as collect form data, generate dynamic page content, or send and receive cookies. But PHP can do much more.

There are three main areas where PHP scripts are used.

- Server-side scripting. This is the most traditional and main target field for PHP. You need three things to make this work: the PHP parser (CGI or server module), a web server and a web browser. You need to run the web server, with a connected PHP installation. You can access the PHP program output with a web browser, viewing the PHP page through the server. All these can run on your home machine if you are just experimenting with PHP programming. See the installation instructions section for more information.
- Command line scripting. You can make a PHP script to run it without any server or browser. You only need the PHP parser to use it this way. This type of usage is ideal for scripts regularly executed using cron (on *nix or Linux) or Task Scheduler (on Windows). These scripts can also be used for simple text processing tasks. See the section about Command line usage of PHP for more information.
- Writing desktop applications. PHP is probably not the very best language to create a desktop application with a graphical user interface, but if you know PHP very well, and would like to use some advanced PHP features in your client-side applications you can also use PHP-GTK to write such programs. You also have the ability to write crossplatform applications this way. PHP-GTK is an extension to PHP, not available in the main distribution. If you are interested in PHP-GTK, visit » its own website.

- PHP can be used on all major operating systems, including Linux, many Unix variants (including HP-UX, Solaris and OpenBSD), Microsoft Windows, macOS, RISC OS, and probably others. PHP also has support for most of the web servers today. This includes Apache, IIS, and many others. And this includes any web server that can utilize the FastCGI PHP binary, like lighttpd and nginx. PHP works as either a module, or as a CGI processor.

So with PHP, we have the freedom of choosing an operating system and a web server. Furthermore, you also have the choice of using procedural programming or object oriented programming (OOP), or a mixture of them both.

With PHP we are not limited to output HTML. PHP's abilities includes outputting images, PDF files and even Flash movies (using libswf and Ming) generated on the fly. You can also output easily any text, such as XHTML and any other XML file. PHP can autogenerate these files, and save them in the file system, instead of printing it out, forming a server-side cache for your dynamic content.

One of the strongest and most significant features in PHP is its support for a wide range of databases. Writing a database-enabled web page is incredibly simple using one of the database specific extensions (e.g., for mysql), or using an abstraction layer like PDO, or connect to any database supporting the Open Database Connection standard via the ODBC extension. Other databases may utilize cURL or sockets, like CouchDB.

PHP also has support for talking to other services using protocols such as LDAP, IMAP, SNMP, NNTP, POP3, HTTP, COM (on Windows) and countless others. You can also open raw network sockets and interact using any other protocol. PHP has support for the WDDX complex data exchange between virtually all Web programming languages. Talking about interconnection, PHP has support for instantiation of Java objects and using them transparently as PHP objects.

PHP has useful text processing features, which includes the Perl compatible regular expressions (PCRE), and many extensions and tools to parse and access XML documents. PHP standardizes all of the XML extensions on the solid base of libxml2, and extends the feature set adding SimpleXML, XMLReader and XMLWriter support.

And many other interesting extensions exist, which are categorized both alphabetically and by category. And there are additional PECL extensions that may or may not be documented within the PHP manual itself, like » XDebug.

PHP can be embedded in HTML, and it's well suited for web development and the creation of dynamic web pages for web applications, e-commerce applications, and database applications. It's considered a friendly language with abilities to easily connect with MySQL, Oracle, and other databases.

Apache Web-server: The Apache HTTP Server, colloquially called Apache (/ə'pætʃɪ/ ə-PATCH-ee), is free and open-source cross-platform web server software, released under the terms of Apache License 2.0. Apache is developed and maintained by an open community of developers under the auspices of the Apache Software Foundation.

The vast majority of Apache HTTP Server instances run on a Linux distribution, but current versions also run on Microsoft Windows and a wide variety of Unix-like systems. Past versions also ran on OpenVMS, NetWare, OS/2 and other operating systems.

Originally based on the NCSA HTTPd server, development of Apache began in early 1995 after work on the NCSA code stalled. Apache played a key role in the initial growth of the World Wide Web, quickly overtaking NCSA HTTPd as the dominant HTTP server, and has remained most popular since April 1996. In 2009, it became the first web server software to serve more than 100 million websites. As of August 2018, it was estimated to serve 39% of all active websites and 35% of the top million websites.

Apache supports a variety of features, many implemented as compiled modules which extend the core functionality. These can range from authentication schemes to supporting server-side programming languages such as Perl, Python, Tcl and PHP. Popular authentication modules include `mod_access`, `mod_auth`, `mod_digest`, and `mod_auth_digest`, the successor to `mod_digest`. A sample of other features include Secure Sockets Layer and Transport Layer Security support (`mod_ssl`), a proxy module (`mod_proxy`), a URL rewriting module (`mod_rewrite`), custom log files (`mod_log_config`), and filtering support (`mod_include` and `mod_ext_filter`).

Popular compression methods on Apache include the external extension module, `mod_gzip`, implemented to help with reduction of the size (weight) of web pages served over HTTP.

ModSecurity is an open source intrusion detection and prevention engine for Web applications. Apache logs can be analyzed through a Web browser using free scripts, such as AWStats/W3Perl or Visitors.

Virtual hosting allows one Apache installation to serve many different websites. For example, one computer with one Apache installation could simultaneously serve example.com, example.org, test47.test-server.example.edu, etc.

Apache features configurable error messages, DBMS-based authentication databases, content negotiation and supports several graphical user interfaces (GUIs).

It supports password authentication and digital certificate authentication. Because the source code is freely available, anyone can adapt the server for specific needs, and there is a large public library of Apache add-ons.

A more detailed list of features is provided below:

- Loadable Dynamic Modules
- Multiple Request Processing modes (MPMs) including Event-based/Async, Threaded and Prefork.
- Highly scalable (easily handles more than 10,000 simultaneous connections)
- Handling of static files, index files, auto-indexing and content negotiation
- .htaccess per-directory configuration support
- Reverse proxy with caching
- Load balancing with in-band health checks
- Multiple load balancing mechanisms
- Fault tolerance and Failover with automatic recovery
- WebSocket, FastCGI, SCGI, AJP and uWSGI support with caching
- Dynamic configuration
- TLS/SSL with SNI and OCSP stapling support, via OpenSSL or wolfSSL.
- Name- and IP address-based virtual servers
- IPv6-compatible
- HTTP/2 support
- Fine-grained authentication and authorization access control
- gzip compression and decompression
- URL rewriting
- Headers and content rewriting

- Custom logging with rotation
- Concurrent connection limiting
- Request processing rate limiting
- Bandwidth throttling
- Server Side Includes
- IP address-based geolocation
- User and Session tracking
- WebDAV
- Embedded Perl, PHP and Lua scripting
- CGI support
- public_html per-user web-pages
- Generic expression parser
- Real-time status views
- XML support
- FTP support (by a separate module)

Instead of implementing a single architecture, Apache provides a variety of MultiProcessing Modules (MPMs), which allow it to run in either a process-based mode, a hybrid (process and thread) mode, or an event-hybrid mode, in order to better match the demands of each particular infrastructure. Choice of MPM and configuration is therefore important. Where compromises in performance must be made, Apache is designed to reduce latency and increase throughput relative to simply handling more requests, thus ensuring consistent and reliable processing of requests within reasonable time-frames.[clarification needed]

For delivering static pages, Apache 2.2 series was considered significantly slower than nginx and varnish. To address this issue, the Apache developers created the Event MPM, which mixes the use of several processes and several threads per process in an asynchronous event-based loop. This architecture as implemented in the Apache 2.4 series performs at least as well as event-based web servers, according to Jim Jagielski and other independent sources. However, some independent but significantly outdated benchmarks show that it is still half as fast as nginx MySQL: MySQL (/ˌmaɪˌɛsˌkjuːˈɛl/ "My S-Q-L") is an open-source relational database management system (RDBMS). Its name is a combination of "My", the name of co-founder Michael Widenius's daughter, and "SQL", the abbreviation for Structured Query Language.

MySQL is free and open-source software under the terms of the GNU General Public License, and is also available under a variety of proprietary licenses. MySQL was owned and sponsored by the Swedish company MySQL AB, which was bought by Sun Microsystems (now Oracle Corporation). In 2010, when Oracle acquired Sun, Widenius forked the open-source MySQL project to create MariaDB.

MySQL is a component of the LAMP web application software stack (and others), which is an acronym for Linux, Apache, MySQL, Perl/PHP/Python.

MySQL is offered under two different editions: the open source MySQL Community Server and the proprietary Enterprise Server.[72] MySQL Enterprise Server is differentiated by a series of proprietary extensions which install as server plugins, but otherwise shares the version numbering system and is built from the same code base.

Major features as available in MySQL 5.6:

- A broad subset of ANSI SQL 99, as well as extensions
- Cross-platform support
- Stored procedures, using a procedural language that closely adheres to SQL/PSM[73]
- Triggers
- Cursors
- Updatable views
- Online Data Definition Language (DDL) when using the InnoDB Storage Engine.
- Information schema
- Performance Schema that collects and aggregates statistics about server execution and query performance for monitoring purposes.
- A set of SQL Mode options to control runtime behavior, including a strict mode to better adhere to SQL standards.
- X/Open XA distributed transaction processing (DTP) support; two phase commit as part of this, using the default InnoDB storage engine
- Transactions with savepoints when using the default InnoDB Storage Engine. The NDB Cluster Storage Engine also supports transactions.
- ACID compliance when using InnoDB and NDB Cluster Storage Engines
- SSL support
- Query caching
- Sub-SELECTs (i.e. nested SELECTs)

- Built-in replication support
- Asynchronous replication: master-slave from one master to many slaves or many masters to one slave
- Semi synchronous replication: Master to slave replication where the master waits on replication
- Synchronous replication: Multi-master replication is provided in MySQL Cluster
- Virtual Synchronous: Self managed groups of MySQL servers with multi master support can be done using: Galera Cluster or the built in Group Replication plugin
- Full-text indexing and searching
- Embedded database library
- Unicode support
- Partitioned tables with pruning of partitions in optimizer
- Shared-nothing clustering through MySQL Cluster
- Multiple storage engines, allowing one to choose the one that is most effective for each table in the application.
- Native storage engines InnoDB, MyISAM, Merge, Memory (heap), Federated, Archive, CSV, Blackhole, NDB Cluster.
- Commit grouping, gathering multiple transactions from multiple connections together to increase the number of commits per second.

Knowledge Based Decision Support System (KBDSS) is a unique ranking system for universities and R&D organizations. It provides measurable, verifiable and unbiased ranking of universities and R&D organizations through an Interactive User Interface. The most distinguishing feature of STAIRS would be that it would be available as a web-based utility through which a user can redefine the weights (through an interactive interface) based on the user's priorities and perception to help decision. Subjective rankings based on non-inclusive parameters and arbitrary weights may fail to bring out the quality intrinsic in organizations like CSIR; there is need for urgent action.

Calibration and Validation

For calibration and validation of web-portal developed to calculate the ranking score, data from different CSIR labs website is collected. Data was collected irrespective of year and is indicative only. Final score may be change with final data collection. The score calculation is as below:

Rank calculated by the web-portal was validated with manual calculation on the collected parameters. From the above figure the score of NPL and CDRI is almost similar.

Score on the Intensity (W_i) for different CSIR labs is shown in the figure below. The intensity score of CDRI is lower than other labs.
